

Zoology is a survey of ecology, bacteria, protozoa, ornithology, ectothermic and endothermic vertebrates, water conservation, and the life processes of plants and pollinators using written materials, laboratory techniques (including an incubator for both bacteria and eggs, composting with worms, flower press, and plant propagation), microscopes, field work, and dissections.